The Public Health Association of BC (PHABC) is seeking a passionate and community-driven leader to serve as the Bridge2FutureBC Regional Lead for the Vancouver Region. Reporting to the Bridge2FutureBC Provincial Manager, the successful candidate will oversee the day-to-day regional implementation of the Bridge2FutureBC: Creating Pathways for Youth Employment program. This role will support the Lower Mainland region in a provincial initiative aimed at supporting youth receiving income assistance to access paid employment, training, and long-term labour market attachment within the food systems sector. This is a full-time temporary employment contract position from July 2026 to March 2029 and involves engaging youth and facilitating impactful employment placements.

The ideal candidate has a strong background in youth engagement, food systems, and community development, with an understanding of equity-oriented and trauma-informed approaches to participant engagement and workforce development. With national and international partnerships, PHABC engages in dialogue and action on public health issues across Canada. PHABC has a strong track record in fiscal stability, community development, education, and health initiatives, working with federal and provincial governments and knowledge development and exchange projects.

About the Project

Bridge2FutureBC is a 3-year provincial initiative (April 2026 – March 2029) designed to address persistent gaps in youth employment for individuals 16–30 years old receiving income assistance across British Columbia. Many youth in this population face systemic barriers to employment, including limited work experience, lack of access to training opportunities, and reduced exposure to supportive employment networks. At the same time, employers across the province continue to experience labour shortages, particularly in entry-level and transitional positions. This program is designed to bridge the gap by connecting youth to meaningful, paid work and training opportunities that support long-term labour market attachment in the food systems sector.

Bridge2FutureBC takes an equity-informed and evidence-driven approach, centering youth with lived experience and engaging employers, service providers, and community organisations in co-developing solutions. The program aims not only to support individual participants but also generate insights and approaches that can inform future workforce development strategies across BC.

By intentionally aligning income assistance employment pathways with food systems work, Bridge2FutureBC aims to address both poverty-related food insecurity and workforce gaps, supporting healthier communities and more resilient local food systems across BC.

Key program goals include:

- Increasing access to paid employment and skills training for youth on income assistance
- Building confidence, work readiness, and transferable skills
- Supporting sustained attachment to the labour market and reducing reliance on oncome assistance over time
- Strengthening collaboration between employers, communities, and service systems
- Identifying scalable and replicable approaches to youth employment programming

Activities include building relationships with youth and employers, supporting youth connections to opportunities, coordinating pilot placements, conducting ongoing follow-up, and providing resources and mentorship to help youth succeed, alongside contributing to evaluation efforts to understand what works and why.
